

Protection granted. Then the wait.

When someone is granted asylum in France, their administrative journey is only just beginning. This website shows, step by step, what refugees and beneficiaries of subsidiary protection have to accomplish – and the gap between the time actually observed and the time set by law.

Data verified in June 2026 – OFPRA, Conseil d'État, Défenseur des droits, UNHCR, Légifrance – supplemented by field feedback.

A reality that is often poorly understood

Worldwide, around three out of four refugees are hosted by low- or middle-income countries, most often neighbours of conflict zones. Out of nearly 43 million refugees worldwide, France hosts only a modest share. And once protection is granted, another journey begins: that of the procedures and the wait.

Reconstituting civil status after a favourable decision

A protected person can no longer turn to the authorities of their country of origin. It is OFPRA that must reconstitute their civil status – and without these documents, almost nothing is possible.

THE SITUATION

A protected person can no longer turn to the authorities of their country of origin. It is the OFPRA which, through its protection division, establishes, reconstitutes and maintains their civil status and issues the documents serving as records (birth certificate, marriage certificate, family record book) – documents which have the value of authentic instruments. Deadlines have risen sharply: from 141 days in 2017 to 240 days in 2021, then a backlog exceeding 31,500 applications at the end of 2022. The situation has improved since the end of 2023, but the average deadline remained 11.7 months in 2023, 10.8 months in 2024 and 9.1 months in 2025, with still 59,860 files pending at the end of 2024. No deadline is legally enforceable against the OFPRA to carry out this task.

THE PROBLEM

As long as the OFPRA has not established the records, the beneficiary lives in a grey zone: the prefecture cannot issue the final residence permit as long as the civil status record has not been communicated to it; to this are added the opening of a full-service bank account, the signing of a lease, marriage, the family record book, certain benefits. The Conseil d'État (30 January 2025) held that the certificate of extension of processing and the status were sufficient to exercise most rights; in practice, this certificate often remains poorly known or poorly accepted at counters (banks, employers, landlords, CAF, France Travail, town halls), and the refugee has no enforceable deadline or effective channel of petition.

OUR PROPOSALS

Proposal 1

Enter an enforceable legal deadline of 4 months

Supplement Article L121-9 of the CESEDA with a maximum deadline of four months (six months for files requiring a supplementary investigation or the legalisation of foreign records) between the complete application and the issuance of the record by the OFPRA — a clear reference standard, currently non-existent.

Proposal 2

Attach to the exceedance a penalty payment and a simple channel of petition Provide by decree for petitioning the judge for an order to issue subject to a penalty payment (art. L911-1 et seq. CJA); create upstream a digital complaint to the OFPRA, with acknowledgement of receipt and a response within 15 days, as well as a reasoned emergency procedure (marriage, birth, family reunification, hiring).

Proposal 3

Reinforce resources and complete the digitalisation

Make permanent and increase the staffing of protection officers dedicated to civil status; generalise online filing and tracking with secure digital issuance (electronically signed, verifiable record); publish each quarter open indicators (backlog, average deadline, 9th-decile deadline).

Proposal 4

Guarantee the full enforceability of the certificate

Attach to art. L561-16 of the CESEDA a text recalling that the certificate of extension of processing and the receipt serve as proof of residence and of the right to work, and issue an inter-ministerial instruction enforceable against banks (via the ACPR), landlords, employers, CAF and France Travail, prohibiting them from requiring a final record when the certificate is produced.

Proposal 5

Recognise the probative value of provisional documents

Specify in the CESEDA and by circular (civil status officers, prefectures) that the provisional documents and the administrative certificate issued by the OFPRA pending the final record have sufficient probative value to initiate the procedures of civil life — so that waiting no longer paralyses the exercise of rights.

Proposal 6

Give OFPRA the means to clear the backlog

Make permanent and increase the number of protection officers dedicated to civil status, and fund a backlog-clearance plan (nearly 60,000 pending cases), to reach an enforceable target deadline.

Legal basis L121-9 CESEDA R121-35 L561-16 CE 30 janv. 2025, 495916

Article L121-9 of the CESEDA

The OFPRA is empowered to issue to refugees, beneficiaries of subsidiary protection and stateless persons the documents necessary for the acts of civil life, in particular the documents serving as civil status records. Its director general authenticates these records, which have the value of authentic instruments and make up for the absence of records issued in the country of origin. The text sets no establishment deadline.

Article R121-35 of the CESEDA

Specifies the conditions for the establishment and issuance of records by the Office and confirms their value as authentic instruments, the Office being able to rectify only purely material omissions and errors. Here again, no deadline enforceable against the OFPRA is provided for.

Article L561-16 of the CESEDA

Pending the final establishment of their civil status by the OFPRA, the protected person may claim the benefit of the rights opened by the Labour Code, the Social Security Code, the Social Action and Families Code and the Construction and Housing Code, on the basis of the family composition taken into account during the examination of the asylum application.

Conseil d'État, 2nd-7th joint chambers, 30 January 2025, Nos. 495916 and 495917

Seized by the GISTI and the ADDE, on the one hand, and by La Cimade, the GAS, JRS France and the LDH, on the other, of the implicit refusal to take measures to reduce the OFPRA's deadlines, the Conseil d'État dismissed the applications. It noted that the deadlines had begun to decrease from the last quarter of 2023, to be brought down to less than ten months, and that protected status, combined with the certificate of extension of processing and the rights opened by art. L561-16, made it possible to exercise most of the rights attached to the status.

THE SITUATION

The travel document for refugees (TVR), the identity and travel document (TIV) issued to beneficiaries of subsidiary protection, and the travel document for stateless persons are secure biometric documents that replace the national passport – which these persons cannot request from their country of origin. The application is exclusively digital, on the ANEF. Unlike the validity period and the fee, which are set by law, no text sets a legal deadline for production or issuance. In practice, prefectures recommend filing at least three months before departure and announce deadlines of around 30 to 60 days, without guarantee or priority processing; actual deadlines are sometimes much longer, with no organised emergency procedure.

legal deadline for production or issuance set for the travel document: no text frames it

3 months

minimum period merely recommended by prefectures for filing before travel, without any guarantee of compliance

THE PROBLEM

Without an enforceable deadline, the protected person has no guarantee as to the date on which they will actually be able to travel: visiting relatives in a third country, a business trip, a medical procedure, the death of a relative. The absence of an emergency procedure makes it impossible to take account of compelling situations. The recommendation to file « at least three months before » places on the person an uncertainty they cannot control, when, by definition, they cannot obtain a passport from their country of origin – depriving of effectiveness a right recognised by law.

OUR PROPOSALS

Proposal 1

Enter a regulatory issuance deadline in the CESEDA

Supplement the regulatory part of the CESEDA (around art. R561-8) with an enforceable maximum deadline for production and delivery of the document, set at two months from a complete application, aligned with the practice for the ordinary passport. Failing a decision, provide for a mandatory prefectural point of contact and an accelerated remedy.

Proposal 2

Create an emergency procedure for compelling reasons

Introduce an emergency channel with issuance within 5 to 10 business days in the event of a justified compelling reason (serious medical reason, death or illness of a relative, compelling family reason, dated professional obligation), with a list of supporting documents and a priority desk – on the model of the existing emergency procedure for the passport and the national identity card (CNI).

Proposal 3

Guarantee online tracking and published deadlines

Make mandatory, on the ANEF, step-by-step time-stamped tracking (filing, processing, production, making available), and the quarterly publication, by prefecture, of the actual average issuance deadlines – to make the administration accountable and allow the management of discrepancies.

Proposal 4

Attach effective guarantees to exceeding the deadline

In the event of an exceedance attributable to the administration, provide for a penalty payment as of right in urgent proceedings before the administrative judge and the possibility of issuing a provisional travel document allowing an already planned trip – like the provisional documents existing in residence matters.

Proposal 5

Reduce or abolish the fee for the most precarious

Amend section IV of Article 953 of the CGI to exempt from the stamp duty (€45 or €40) beneficiaries of protection who have no resources or who receive minimum social benefits, or introduce a reduced rate, so that the cost is not an additional obstacle to the exercise of a fundamental right.

Proposal 6

Resource the document-production service properly

Provide the travel-document service with staff and biometric equipment matched to demand, to bring production down to a few weeks.

No production or issuance deadline is set.

Article L561-10 of the CESEDA – identity and travel document

The beneficiary of subsidiary protection may be issued an « identity and travel document », except for compelling reasons of national security or public order. It does not allow travel to the State or States where the person concerned would be exposed to the serious harm referred to in art. L512-1. No production or issuance deadline is set.

The document may be withdrawn or its renewal refused for compelling reasons of national security or public order (L561-13).

Article L582-7 of the CESEDA – travel document for stateless persons

A foreign national recognised as stateless and holding a valid residence permit may be issued a « travel document for stateless persons », except for compelling reasons of national security or public order, its validity period likewise being referred to section IV of Article 953 of the CGI. No production or issuance deadline is set.

Article 953, IV, of the General Tax Code

Sets the validity period and the fee: document issued to refugees, stateless persons or beneficiaries of subsidiary protection holding a resident card – valid for 5 years, €45 fee; document issued to stateless persons or beneficiaries of subsidiary protection holding a 4-year multi-year card – valid for 4 years, €40 fee; identity and travel document issued to a foreign national who is not a beneficiary of protection (e.g. a child) – valid for 1 year, €15 fee. No provision imposes an issuance deadline.

Specifies the documents to be presented (residence permit, two regulation photographs, proof of address or declaration of domiciliation). The text sets the conditions of filing but no processing or document-delivery deadline.

THE SITUATION

Once protection is granted by the OFPRA or the CNDA, the prefect has a regulatory deadline of three months to issue the residence permit. Refugees are entitled to a ten-year resident card; beneficiaries of subsidiary protection first receive a multi-year card of up to four years, then, after four years of lawful residence, a ten-year resident card. In practice, this deadline is very frequently exceeded, with no penalty attached to it. At renewal, processing via the digital platform ANEF generates interruptions of rights documented by the Defender of Rights, the Conseil d'État and associations.

6 to 12 months

Deadlines set for the State by the Conseil d'État (5 May 2026, No. 502860) to correct the malfunctions of the ANEF

THE PROBLEM

The three-month deadline is devoid of binding force: exceeding it exposes the administration to no penalty. At renewal, going through the ANEF, which has become the standard channel, causes interruptions of rights – permit expired without a certificate of extension, loss of employment, housing and benefits.

The right to file the application and to a certificate covering all rights (residence, work, benefits) is not effectively guaranteed.

OUR PROPOSALS

Proposal 1

Make the three-month deadline enforceable and penalised

Supplement Articles R. 424-1 and R. 424-7 of the CESEDA: failing issuance within three months, a certificate serving as a residence permit (conferring the right to work and to benefits) is issued as of right, with an automatic penalty payment paid to the person concerned in the event of an unjustified exceedance (on the model of the urgent useful-measures application, art. L. 521-3 CJA).

Proposal 2

Automatically issue a certificate covering all rights

Amend Article R. 431-15-1 of the CESEDA so that the certificate of extension of processing is generated automatically by the ANEF as soon as the complete file is submitted, expressly mentions the right to residence, to work and to benefits, and is renewed automatically – in line with the injunction of the Conseil d'État of 5 May 2026 (No. 502860).

Proposal 3

Automatically extend the validity of the permit during processing

Provide by decree that the permit of a protected person who has filed their renewal application within the deadlines remains valid until the express decision of the prefecture, without any submission-window condition or additional step – removing any gap between the expiry of the permit and the certificate.

Proposal 4

Guarantee the right to file and access to an appointment

Make the substitute solution operational (Decree No. 2023-191 of 22 March 2023): in-person reception within 30 days where using the ANEF is impossible, time-stamped traceability of attempts, facilitated access to the urgent useful-measures judge (in the wake of CE, 18 February 2022, No. 455740).

Proposal 5

Make the ANEF reliable and publish indicators

Implement the injunctions of the Conseil d'État (No. 502860): simultaneous filing on distinct grounds, correction of files, an end to refusals wrongly based on the absence of return of the previous permit. Publish for each prefecture the average deadline and the compliance rate with the three-month deadline, with a monitoring committee.

Proposal 6

Strengthen the prefectures' foreign-nationals services

Make permanent and expand the announced 500 extra staff: recruit established officers in prefecture 'séjour' services, with multi-year funding, to absorb the queues and meet the three-month deadline.

Legal basis R424-1 CESEDA R424-7 L424-1 / L424-13 R431-15-1 CE 452798 CE 502860

The prefect issues the resident card (art. L. 424-1 or L. 424-3) within a deadline of three months from the decision recognising refugee status by the OFPRA or the CNDA. This deadline carries no penalty in the event of an exceedance.

Article R424-7 of the CESEDA

The prefect issues the multi-year residence card (art. L. 424-9 or L. 424-11) within a deadline of three months from the decision granting subsidiary protection. As for refugees, this deadline carries no penalty.

Articles L424-1, L424-4, L424-9, L424-13 of the CESEDA

The refugee receives a ten-year resident card (L. 424-1); L. 424-4 refers to decree the deadline for issuance (implemented by R. 424-1). The beneficiary of subsidiary protection receives a multi-year card with a maximum duration of four years (L. 424-9), then, after four years of lawful and uninterrupted residence, a ten-year resident card (L. 424-13), subject in particular to the absence of a threat to public order.

Articles R431-15-1 and R431-5 of the CESEDA

Filing on the online service gives rise to a filing certificate which does not establish the lawfulness of residence. Where the processing of a complete application extends beyond the expiry of the permit, the prefect makes available a certificate of extension of processing (API), valid for a maximum of three months and renewable (R. 431-15-1). The renewal application must be filed between the 120th and the 60th day preceding expiry (R. 431-5); outside this window, the maintenance of rights is not guaranteed.

CE, Section, 3 June 2022, No. 452798

The Conseil d'État annuls the decree making recourse to the ANEF mandatory insofar as it does not provide for a substitute solution: the administration must provide support and a non-digital channel where the user is unable to use the online service.

CE, 5 May 2026, No. 502860

The Conseil d'État orders the State to remedy the malfunctions of the ANEF: within six months, ensure the making available or renewal in good time of certificates of extension of processing and that the rights attached (in particular the right to work) appear on them, allow the completion of files, put an end to refusals wrongly based on the absence of return of the previous permit; within twelve months, allow the simultaneous filing of applications on distinct grounds.

Naturalisation

THE SITUATION

Article 21-25-1 of the Code civil requires the public authority to respond to a naturalisation application within a deadline of eighteen months (twelve months for a foreign national habitually residing in France for at least ten years), which may be extended once by three months by a reasoned decision. But this deadline runs only from the submission of all the documents of a complete file, « against which a receipt is issued immediately ». Yet Article 37-1 of Decree No. 93-1362 provides that this receipt is issued « upon submission of the documents », without attaching to this obligation any specified deadline or any penalty. In practice, the issuance of the receipt is delayed, or even omitted – which the Defender of Rights (Défenseur des droits) described as a failure of the public service (decision No. 2024-025 of 19 February 2024). In 2024, 103,661 people acquired French nationality, of whom 48,494 by naturalisation.

48,494

Naturalisations in 2024, out of 103,661 acquisitions of nationality (+6.6% in one year)

THE PROBLEM

The legal deadline is almost always circumvented by a simple mechanism: as long as the acknowledgement of completeness has not been issued, the eighteen-month clock does not start. The applicant remains in a wait with no legal end. When the deadline finally expires, the administration's silence amounts to an implicit refusal — and not acceptance: the State's inaction is turned against the user. The only real remedy — petitioning the minister (RAPO, mandatory prior administrative appeal) then the Administrative Court of Nantes to compel a ruling — adds several months, even years, at the cost of a lawyer.

OUR PROPOSALS

Proposal 1

Start the deadline from the complete submission on the ANEF

Amend Article 21-25-1 of the Code civil so that the 18-month deadline (12 months) runs from the online submission of a complete file, the time-stamped acknowledgement of registration serving as the acknowledgement of completeness. Failing that, frame the issuance of the receipt with a short, enforceable deadline (for example 30 days) in Article 37-1 of Decree No. 93-1362.

Proposal 2

Make exceeding the deadline genuinely penalised

Beyond the unmet deadline, allow petitioning the urgent-applications judge (juge des référés) for an order to rule, accompanied by a penalty payment (for example €100 per day of delay), at the State's expense. Examine easing the conditions for admissibility of the appeal in the event of prolonged failure to act.

Proposal 3

Require an express and reasoned decision

Frame the implicit refusal: any complete application should receive an express and reasoned decision within the legal deadline. An application left without a notified decision would be deemed admissible, without prejudice to the review of the substantive conditions – removing the perverse effect of silence amounting to rejection.

Proposal 4

Create an accelerated procedure for deadline disputes alone

Establish before the Administrative Court of Nantes a specific and accelerated procedure (single judge, within a few months) limited to litigation over the exceeding of deadlines and the non-issuance of the receipt, distinct from litigation on the merits.

Proposal 5

Make the deadline transparent and tracked online

Display in the ANEF account the date of completeness, the applicable legal deadline, a countdown of the time remaining and the processing stage; publish each quarter the actual deadlines and the backlog of the SDANF, and reinforce staffing in proportion to submissions.

Proposal 6

Give the SDANF the means to meet the deadline

A deadline only matters if the administration can meet it. Adopt a multi-year recruitment plan for caseworkers at the sub-directorate for access to French nationality (SDANF), funded by a dedicated budget sized to the actual caseload – to clear the backlog, not just make the deadline enforceable.

Article 21-25-1 of the Code civil

« The public authority's response to an application for the acquisition of French nationality by naturalisation must occur at the latest eighteen months from the submission of all the documents necessary to constitute a complete file, against which a receipt is issued immediately. » This deadline is reduced to twelve months for a foreign national who can prove habitual residence in France for at least ten years, and may be extended once, by a reasoned decision, by three months. The starting point is the submission of the documents (acknowledgement of completeness), and not the date of filing.

Article 37-1 of Decree No. 93-1362 of 30 December 1993

In its version in force (Decree No. 2024-108 of 14 February 2024, applicable to applications filed from 1 January 2026), it provides: « Upon submission of the documents provided for above, the authority with which the application was filed issues the receipt provided for in Article 21-25-1 of the Code civil. » No provision, however, sets a specified, enforceable maximum deadline for this issuance, which makes it possible to delay in practice the starting point of the legal processing deadline.

Silence amounting to rejection – art. L. 231-4 of the CRPA

By way of derogation from the principle « silence amounts to acceptance » (art. L. 231-1 of the Code of relations between the public and the administration), silence kept on an application for naturalisation by decree amounts to an implicit decision of rejection. Likewise, silence kept for four months by the minister on the mandatory prior administrative appeal (RAPO) amounts to rejection.

Jurisdiction and avenues of appeal

An unfavourable decision must first be challenged by a RAPO before the minister in charge of naturalisations (deadline: 2 months); its rejection may then be challenged before the Administrative Court of Nantes, which alone has nationwide jurisdiction for disputes relating to the sub-directorate for access to French nationality (SDANF), within a deadline of 2 months. The judge may compel a ruling, where appropriate subject to a penalty payment.

Bringing in and enabling the movement of one's children: family reunification and travel document (DCEM)

A person granted refugee status or subsidiary protection has the right to bring in family members who remained abroad (family reunification), without any condition as to resources, housing or length of residence. Once the family is in France, a foreign minor child needs a travel document (DCEM) to travel outside France and return without a visa. On paper, these rights are clear. In practice, everything often gets stuck at the same point: civil status records. Consulates and prefectures demand recent birth certificates (sometimes "less than 3 months old") that the protected person cannot, by definition, request from the authorities of the country they fled. They then depend on the reconstitution of their civil status by OFPRA, whose actual processing times run into months, with no statutory deadline enforceable against the administration.

THE SITUATION

The law is generous but access is choked by an administrative bottleneck: civil status records. Family reunification for refugees depends neither on resources nor on housing (CESEDA art. L561-2), and the DCEM is issued to the child as of right. But consulates, town halls and prefectures demand recent civil status documents that a protected person cannot obtain from their country of origin without putting themselves in danger or undermining the very meaning of their protection. They therefore depend entirely on the reconstitution of their civil status by OFPRA, whose processing times have doubled in five years (177 days in 2019, 240 days in 2021), reaching up to a year locally. Meanwhile, no statutory deadline is enforceable: the administration's silence triggers no effective sanction, and families remain separated for months on end.

Enforceable statutory deadline for issuing the DCEM

~6 to 12 months

Actual reconstitution of civil status by OFPRA

2 months

Period after which silence amounts to a refusal (DCEM)

THE PROBLEM

The requirement for a birth certificate "less than 3 months old" is in practice impossible to satisfy for a protected person: they cannot turn to the authorities of the country they fled, and their French civil status depends on an OFPRA reconstitution with long and unregulated processing times. The result is a circular deadlock: the prefecture or consulate waits for a document that only OFPRA can produce, OFPRA takes several months, and no enforceable statutory deadline makes it possible to break the impasse. Children remain separated from a parent, or can neither travel nor visit family for lack of a DCEM.

OUR PROPOSALS

Proposal 1

Prohibit requiring "recent" documents from protected persons

Issue a national instruction recalling that documents drawn up by OFPRA have the value of authentic instruments and that no recency ("less than 3 months") may be required of a protected person.

Proposal 2

Establish an enforceable deadline for OFPRA reconstitution

Set a maximum regulatory processing time for civil status records, together with a provisional attestation enforceable against prefectures and consulates in the interim.

Proposal 3

Strengthen the resources of OFPRA's civil status division

Increase the staff and budget dedicated to clearing the backlog and bringing processing times below 3 months, given the sharp rise in the number of protected persons.

Proposal 4

Recognise the provisional attestation as a sufficient document

Allow, as of right, a reunification visa or DCEM application to be processed on the basis of the provisional attestation of family composition, without waiting for the final document.

Proposal 5

Clear information and support

Make available, on service-public.gouv.fr and in prefectures, a single notice explaining the sequence OFPRA → consulate → prefecture and the avenues of appeal.

Proposal 6

Facilitate and clarify appeals

Systematically recall, in the event of a visa refusal, the obligation to refer the matter to the Commission for Appeals against Visa Refusals (CRRV) within 30 days before the Nantes administrative court.

Opening a bank account: the right to a basic bank account

Having a deposit account is essential to receive the allowance, get a salary, pay rent or take out a subscription. Yet, for lack of a stable employment contract, proof of stable residence or a banking history in France, many protected persons (including beneficiaries of temporary protection from Ukraine) are refused the opening of an account by banks. French law provides a response to this situation: the "right to an account". Any person residing in France who is refused an account can refer the matter to the Banque de France, which then designates by default an institution required to open the account, free of charge, with basic banking services. This pathway describes the procedure, its theoretical timeframes and the gaps observed on the ground.

Need for a deposit
account

Refusal or restriction
by the bank (no
permanent contract /
no residence)

Referral to the Banque de France under the
right to an account

Designation of an institution by default

ACTUAL TIME

Variable: the designation is often quick, but the actual account opening sees frequent delays – requests for additional documents, postponed appointments.

Waiting times of several weeks are regularly reported.

TIME SET BY LAW

1 business day for the designation, then 3 business days for the account to be opened by the designated bank (from receipt of the documents)

Account opened with free basic banking services

THE SITUATION

The law is clear and protective: once the Banque de France has been referred to, opening the account is no longer a favour but an obligation for the designated bank, within short timeframes (1 business day for the designation, 3 business days for the opening). On paper, no person residing in France should be left without an account.

1 day

business day for the designation of a bank by the Banque de France

3 days

business days for the account to be opened by the designated bank

12 free basic banking services guaranteed

THE PROBLEM

In practice, the pathway remains strewn with obstacles. Many people are unaware that the right to an account even exists; branches sometimes refer them to the procedure without explaining it. At the stage of the actual opening, one observes repeated requests for supporting documents (residence, identity), postponed appointments and accounts opened to the bare minimum, sometimes closed shortly afterwards. Basic banking services, without an overdraft or a conventional chequebook, do not always make it possible to lead a normal economic life (a landlord or an employer may be reluctant). The language barrier and administrative complexity widen the gap between the statutory 3-business-day deadline and the time actually experienced.

OUR PROPOSALS

Proposal 1

Systematic information on the right to an account

Provide, upon any refusal to open an account, a written multilingual notice explaining the referral to the Banque de France, and establish it as a reflex in branches.

Proposal 2

Dedicated support for protected persons

Mobilise social workers (already authorised to refer matters to the Banque de France) and associations to assemble the files and track the timeframes through to the actual opening.

Proposal 3

Enforce the 3-business-day deadline

Set up monitoring of delays and a simple reporting channel (Banque de France, ACPR, Defender of Rights) when the designated bank exceeds the statutory deadline.

Proposal 4

Clarify the documents that may be required

Circulate a standard list of accepted supporting documents (residence permit / temporary protection, proof of domiciliation) to prevent abusive requests for documents.

Proposal 5

Strengthen reception capacity

Recruit and train multilingual staff and mediators at the Banque de France and in support networks, and fund domiciliation structures, to absorb the flows and reduce actual timeframes.

Proposal 6

Broaden the usefulness of basic services

Encourage banks to offer, beyond the minimal services, payment solutions that are genuinely usable for housing and employment.

Finding housing: social housing and leaving emergency accommodation

Once granted protection, many refugees live in emergency accommodation or temporary housing. To access durable housing, the main route is the social housing application, registered under a "single registration number". But supply falls far short of demand: the wait is often measured in months, even years, while the place in accommodation can itself be called into question. This pathway describes the steps, the actual timeframes observed and the rights that protect the person during the wait, in particular the enforceable right to housing (DALO).

Need for housing /

Social housing

ACTUAL TIME

Several months to several years

TIME SET BY LAW

prefectoral order, varying by department
(e.g. 24 months, 36 months)

Risk of having to leave the accommodation
before being rehoused

Housing offer (or DALO appeal)

THE SITUATION

The social housing application rests on a clear and enforceable framework: registration, single registration number, a certificate within the month, and a right of appeal (DALO) if the wait exceeds the "abnormally long timeframe". On paper, being kept in emergency accommodation is guaranteed as long as no suitable solution is offered.

1 month

statutory deadline to receive the certificate with the single registration number (CCH art. L441-2-1)

3 months

deadline to rehouse following a favourable DALO decision (6 months in overseas territories and large urban areas)

no guaranteed national deadline for the allocation of social housing

THE PROBLEM

In practice, the gap between the supply of and demand for social housing makes the wait very long, with no universal statutory cap. The "abnormally long timeframe" varies from one department to another and opens only an avenue of appeal, not immediate housing. Above all, the strain on accommodation places leads to terminations of care while the person has not been rehoused: the principle of continuity of accommodation (CASF art. L345-2-3) is weakened for lack of places, exposing people to being effectively returned to the street.

OUR PROPOSALS

Proposal 1

Secure the continued stay in accommodation

Effectively guarantee the principle of continuity (CASF art. L345-2-3): no termination of care without a suitable solution being offered, and no return to the street.

Proposal 2

Information as soon as protection is granted

Support each protected person in filing the social housing application and obtaining their single registration number without delay, in a language they understand.

Proposal 3

Raise awareness of DALO

Systematically inform people about the amicable appeal before the mediation commission as soon as the abnormally long timeframe is reached, and about the contentious appeal.

Proposal 4

Harmonise the "abnormally long timeframes"

Reduce the disparities between departments and clearly publish the prefectoral order applicable to each area.

Proposal 5

Strengthen resources: supply and support

Increase the stock of housing that can be mobilised (prefectoral quota, Action Logement) and fund social workers and associations supporting people into and within housing.

Proposal 6

Link accommodation and rehousing

Smooth the transition from accommodation to housing (rental intermediation, sliding lease) to avoid breaks in people's pathways.

Importing and registering your vehicle: from foreign plates to the French registration certificate

A person who arrives in France with their car, or who buys one abroad, must have it registered in France. The pathway involves the tax authorities (tax clearance certificate), sometimes technical type-approval (DREAL), then the online registration certificate application (ANTS). In practice, it is a succession of independent counters, each with its own timeframes — with no guaranteed overall schedule. Meanwhile, the car still drives on foreign plates, which attracts police checks.

No enforceable overall completion deadline for the entire import pathway: "Not

FR plates fitted

THE SITUATION

The pathway works when each document arrives: tax clearance certificate from the tax authorities, certificate of conformity (COC) or individual approval (RTI) from the DREAL, then the registration certificate from the ANTS. The law does set a one-month deadline to make the application after acquisition, but no authority is bound by an overall deadline to complete the whole process. The applicant depends on three separate administrations that do not coordinate.

1 month

statutory deadline to file the application after acquisition (C. route R322-2)

no overall statutory deadline for the full completion of the import pathway

€135

fixed fine incurred for driving without French registration within the time limits

THE PROBLEM

During this fragmented pathway, the vehicle remains on foreign plates and continues to be checked by the police and gendarmerie, who specifically target these plates (suspicion of failure to register, to insure or to pass the roadworthiness test). The applicant, although acting in good faith and already engaged in their procedures, is exposed to a fixed fine of €135 and to possible immobilisation – without any overall statutory deadline protecting them as long as the counters have not responded. The provisional "WW" certificate (valid for 4 months) exists to fill this gap, but it is little known and is only issued once the ANTS file has already been submitted.

OUR PROPOSALS

Proposal 1

Single import counter

Make the ANTS a single entry point that triggers, in sequence, the tax clearance certificate and, if needed, the referral to the DREAL, rather than three separate procedures to initiate yourself.

Proposal 2

Protection during processing

Recognise and roll out a proof of procedure in progress (such as a receipt or an automatic WW) that suspends sanctions as long as the administrations have not responded within a reasonable timeframe.

Proposal 3

Enforceable completion deadline

Establish a target overall completion deadline (clearance + type-approval + registration certificate) with a commitment from the administration, filling the current "Not established" gap.

Proposal 4

Targeted information for newcomers

Circulate a clear notice (FR + the languages of the main groups, including Ukrainian) on the order of the steps, the tax clearance certificate that is free for the occasion, and the provisional WW certificate.

Proposal 5

Guidance for law enforcement

Issue an instruction so that checks take account of proof of a procedure in progress and favour a reminder of the rules rather than an immediate fine for someone acting in good faith.

Proposal 6

DREAL resources for RTIs

Strengthen the staff and budgets of the DREAL vehicle units, the main bottleneck for non-EU vehicles requiring individual approval.

Exchanging a driving licence: protected in France, yet dependent on an agreement with the country you fled

A protected person who settles in France long-term must exchange their foreign driving licence for a French one. But the exchange is only possible if a reciprocity agreement exists with the country of origin – the very country they had to flee, and whose authorities OFPRA instructs them never to contact again. Without an agreement, the application is refused, however complete the file.

THE SITUATION

A licence issued by a State outside the European Union can only be exchanged in France if a reciprocity agreement exists with that State (article 5-I-A of the order of 12 January 2012, referring to article R. 222-1 of the Highway Code). Yet the order does provide a specific regime for protected persons: they are exempt from producing a certificate of driving entitlement (article 6-D) and from the residence-permit validity condition (article 11-II), and their one-year period runs from the date of the receipt establishing their status (article 11-I). But none of these provisions exempts them from the reciprocity condition. As a result, a refugee or beneficiary of subsidiary protection from a country with no agreement – Ukraine, for instance – has their application refused on that ground alone. The problem was raised in Parliament (written question to the Senate no. 03096 of 6 February 2025): the government replied that the number of people concerned was "too small to justify" negotiating an agreement, which would in addition require parliamentary ratification. No interim remedy has been offered.

enforceable deadline for the administration to process the application – and no procedure or timetable for concluding the agreement on which everything depends

1 year

the deadline imposed on the protected person to file, running from the receipt (art. 11-I of the order of 12 January 2012)

≈ 98%

of protected Ukrainians in France hold subsidiary protection – precisely the status that requires exchanging the licence without making it possible

THE PROBLEM

The asymmetry runs two ways. First in time: the protected person has one year, on pain of losing the right to exchange for good, while no deadline binds the administration to decide, nor the State to negotiate the agreement on which the outcome depends. Second in the underlying logic: international protection rests on severing ties with the country of origin – the OFPRA decision expressly instructs the person not to contact its authorities – yet the right to drive remains conditional on an agreement with that very country. The paradox is complete: beneficiaries of temporary protection, who do not have their normal residence in France (art. R. 222-2 of the Highway Code), continue to drive on their Ukrainian licence, while those granted subsidiary protection – a more stable status – lose that right. Meanwhile, a bilateral agreement still in force allows Russian nationals to exchange theirs. For those affected the consequence is very concrete: loss of the right to drive, and with it access to a great many jobs, plus the obligation to retake the entire French driving test, at a cost of several months and close to two thousand euros.

OUR PROPOSALS

Proposal 1

Exempt protected persons from the reciprocity condition

Amend article 11 of the order of 12 January 2012 so that the reciprocity condition in article 5-I-A does not apply to refugees, beneficiaries of subsidiary protection and stateless persons – in line with articles 6-D and 11-II, which already exempt them from other conditions precisely because their situation is not that of an ordinary foreign national.

Proposal 2

Recognise licences that comply with the Vienna Convention

Where no bilateral agreement exists, allow the exchange on the basis of the document's compliance with the Vienna Convention on Road Traffic of 8 November 1968, to which France and many countries of origin are parties, with documentary verification by the CERT.

Proposal 3

Suspend the one-year deadline during processing and appeals

Provide that the one-year period under article 11-I is suspended for as long as the administration has not decided, and during appeals, so that slow processing does not extinguish the right itself.

Proposal 4

Review refusals based on reciprocity alone, on the administration's own initiative

Organise a review of applications already refused solely for want of an agreement, with no new time condition, for protected persons who filed within the deadline.

Proposal 5

Provide a fallback scheme where no agreement exists

Where no agreement is in place, open a lighter route – verification of driving entitlement plus a practical check test – instead of retaking the full licence, whose cost and delay are prohibitive for people just settling in.

Proposal 6

Give the CERT the means to process, and publish its timescales

Staff the competent titles centre (CERT EPE) in proportion to the volume of applications, and publish quarterly the average processing times and the refusal rate by ground.

Legal basis Arrêté du 12 janv. 2012, art. 5-I-A art. 6-D art. 11-I et 11-II C. route art. R222-1, R222-2

Order of 12 January 2012, art. 5-I-A

Exchanging a licence issued by a State outside the EU and EEA requires a reciprocity agreement between France and that State (referring to art. R. 222-1 of the Highway Code). This condition carries no exception for beneficiaries of international protection.

Order of 12 January 2012, art. 11-I

For refugees, beneficiaries of subsidiary protection and stateless persons, the one-year period to apply for the exchange runs from the date of the receipt establishing their status.

Order of 12 January 2012, art. 11-II and art. 6-D

These same persons are exempt from the residence-permit validity condition (art. 5-I-B) and from producing the certificate of driving entitlement: a specific regime therefore already exists for them, but it does not cover reciprocity.

Highway Code, art. R. 222-2

The obligation to exchange applies only to persons whose normal residence is in France. Beneficiaries of temporary protection fall outside it and keep the use of their original licence, unlike those under long-term protection.

— WHAT WE PROPOSE

Five simple principles

The same thread runs through every journey. Here is what this website stands for.

An enforceable deadline

A clear deadline for each step, with a definite starting point that cannot be pushed back by the administration.

An effective penalty

An overrun that has real consequences: a penalty payment, a certificate, or a permit issued automatically by right.

Continuity of rights

No gap between two permits or during processing: residence, work, resources and benefits preserved.

IV

Transparency

A deadline counter, step-by-step online tracking, actual processing times published by prefecture.

Reliable digitalisation

A platform (ANEF) that works, backed by in-person assistance for those who cannot use it.

VI

Resources to match

A deadline is only achievable if the administration has the means. Invest in permanent recruitment and a multi-year budget, sized to the real volume of applications – not just create obligations.

A FINAL WORD

This is not a demand.

This website demands nothing. It respectfully suggests ways to make procedures smoother – the very procedures the administration itself is seeking to improve.

All those on whose behalf these proposals are made – and whom these journeys directly concern – wish first of all to express their deep gratitude to the French Republic. By opening its doors to those who had to flee war and persecution, France has become, for many of us, a new home. We do not forget this welcome, nor the women and men – prefecture and OFPRA staff, associations, volunteers – who make it possible every day.

If we speak of waiting times, it is not to complain but to contribute: clearer and faster procedures benefit everyone – protected persons, the administration, and the French society that welcomed us. It is in this spirit of gratitude and cooperation that these proposals are offered.

— Thank you.
